That the Premier of the State Council, when delivering the Government Work Report in the second session of the 14th National People's Congress, mentioned the need to actively foster emerging industries and future-oriented industries, among which promoting the development of low-altitude economy is regarded as one of the new growth engines; low-altitude economy covers a wide range of industry chains, the scope of which involves the formulation of policies, expansion of application scenarios and efficient collaboration among various segments of the industry chains; at present, quite a number of Mainland cities (including Shenzhen) have formulated plans for the development of low-altitude economy, and Hong Kong, being the southern gateway of the country, should also proactively complement the national policy and tap into the field of low-altitude economy; in this connection, this Council urges the Government to focus on studying and exploring the development of low-altitude economy in Hong Kong, and capitalize on the Mainland's advantages to proactively dovetail and coordinate with various cities in the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area, so as to turn low-altitude economy into one of the new quality productive forces for the smart city clusters in the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area.
